The red ambulance made it all the way to the top of the hill and the $12,500 fund goal of the Appomattox County Rescue Squad -- more than $1,000 extra for operating expenses and equipment. A. R. For the county, this means a new ambulance and life saving equipment plus needed operational funds for the Squad. In our opinion, it is an absolute must that cattle producers vote for the establishment of a Beef Cattle Commission if we are to have a healthy, growing cattle business.

"Cattle producers who are eligible and certified to vote in the referendum will receive a ballot by mail about Nov. 1st.

"Experience in Virginia has shown that delegates to the General Assembly are more willing to help groups that are striving to help themselves. We certainly need expanded help in researching some of the problems of production and marketing that have plagued our business for years.

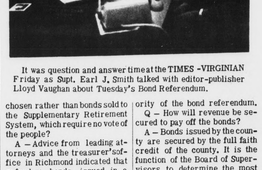
Questions And Answers On School Bond Issue



It was question and answer time at the TIMES - VIRGINIAN Friday as Supt. Earl J. Smith talked with editor-publisher Lloyd Vaughan about Tuesday's Bond Referendum.

Superintendent Earl J. Smith following a discussion last week with the Times-Virginian editor-publisher W. Lloyd Vaughan has suggested that voters might be better informed about the proposed $2 million bond issue for a new senior high school for Appomattox County if questions were clearly stated and answered. The questions are representative of those asked during presentations made by members of the Appomattox County Citizens Committee For Better Schools. The county committee has appeared before P-TA groups, civic clubs and others to give information to the voters prior to the Nov. 3 vote.

Q - First, what is the total anticipated cost of the new school?

A - Based on estimates received from the architects, the new facility is estimated to cost approximately $3,000,000.

Q - The bond issue is only for $2,000,000, how will the rest of the facility be financed?

A - Approval has been received for a loan of $500,000 from the Literary Fund at an interest rate of 3% State and federal grants in the approximate amount of $500,000 is anticipated as their share in the construction and equipping of the vocational wing of the building.

Q - Why not borrow more money from the Literary Fund?

A - Money available from this fund is limited. It is available to all the school divisions of the state and the $500,000 was the most that could be secured.

Q- Why were referendum bonds chosen rather than bonds sold to the Supplementary Retirement System, which require no vote of the people?

A - Advice from leading attorneys and the treasurer's office in Richmond indicated that refendum bonds, issued in a $2,000,000 block and sold on the open market could probably be sold at a lower rate of interest than if we sold to the Retirement System. To proceed through the Retirement System would mean issuing the bonds in $1,000,000 blocks. The first $1,000,000 would have to be sold before the second $1,000,000 could be issued. Thus, both from time and economy it seemed desirable to seek bonds issued on the authority of the bond referendum.

Q - How will revenue be secured to pay off the bonds?

A - Bonds issued by the county are secured by the full faith credit of the county. It is the function of the Board of Supervisors to determine the most equitable way to pay off the bonds. This would necessarily have to be done for the year in which the first installment was due. Several factors, including growth of the county, reassessment, and the overall financial condition of the county would have to be studied at the time the determination was made. The 75¢ increase in the present tax rate and a 10% utility tax is
